CANADIAN NATIONAL PLACES EQUIPMENT ORDER

Orders for three new cafe-parlor cars and two new sleeping cars have just been placed by the Canadian National Railways with the Canadian Car and Foundry Company of Montreal. They will be delivered in September. The sleeping cars will consist of six sections, one drawing-room and four dormitories, each dormitory for the first time in Canadian practice furnished with both upper and lower berths. Thermomatic heating control will be used, as in other Canadian National cars, with manual controls in the drawing-room and the dormitories.

FIRE PROTECTION SYSTEM INSPECTED

TEST CONDUCTED BY OFFICIAL OF INSURANCE UNDERWRITERS ASSOCIATION

For some time past the Town Council have been attempting to obtain for the citizens a reduction in the rates charged for fire insurance with in the town limits; this being specially due now owing to the increased facilities for fire fighting which the town now has installed, and from the fact that the fire risk has been so greatly reduced owing to the use of natural gas as fuel in practically every home in town.

On Friday and Saturday last Mr. J. Veitch, A.M.E.I.C., the inspector engineer of the fire branch of the Western Canada Insurance Underwriters' association, was in town, and with the fire chief and Councilor Huntingford as chairman of the committee affected, that gentleman made a most thorough and exhaustive test of the newly installed fire protection water system in town.

Pressure tests were made at practically every point on the system, and the pumping facilities and the quantities of water available were very carefully checked up by the engineer.

It was found by the delicate instrument used that at every point on the system when fully charged there was a constant pressure of 120 lbs to the square inch, and that with two hydrants flowing fully opened (i.e. four fire nozzles playing) the system main tanks a pressure of 106 lbs at a 1 1/4 inch nozzle and 86 lbs at a 1 1/2 inch nozzle. The test was conducted in the same manner at a number of the hydrants and in each case there was a variation of only a pound or so in the readings.

Commendation was expressed by the inspector at the Council's foresight in thus providing such a high-class system of fire-fighting protection and his report to the Council after his return to headquarters in Winnipeg will be awaited with interest; especially if it should be of such a nature as to recommend some further reduction in the fire insurance rates for the town.

PAMPHLET ON CUTWORM CONTROL

As an aid to prairie farmers in coping with the pale western cutworm, serious outbreaks of which are expected in certain large areas in Saskatchewan and parts of Alberta, the Entomological Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa have just published a pamphlet, No. 11 N.S., dealing with this crop pest and its control. This pamphlet is essentially practical in its treatment of the subject, and deals completely with all phases of cutworm activity. Not only are control measures fully dealt with, but a concise guide to the safe sowing of damaged fields is included.

Western farmers will find the material in this pamphlet directly useful in the control of damage by the pale western cutworm, and also it enables them to estimate and forecast the probable amount of damage to be expected next year in areas known to be infested during the current season.

Copies of this pamphlet are available without charge on application to the Publications Branch of the Department at Ottawa.

DOMINION OF CANADA 1931 CONVERSION LOAN

LOAN ADDS NOTHING TO THE PRESENT NATIONAL DEBT OF COUNTRY

Official announcement is made today of the terms of the Dominion of Canada 1931 Conversion Loan. This issue extends the opportunity to holders of Dominion of Canada War Loan and Victory Bonds now approaching maturity to convert their holdings into bonds extending over a further period of from 15 to 25 years, and marks what may eventually prove to be the greatest financial operation in the history of Canada—the refunding of the heavy volume of financial obligations incurred during the War period.

The offer does not involve the raising of any new money. Not a penny will be added to the national debt of Canada in consequence of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is entirely a matter of exchanging existing bonds for other bonds of the Dominion. A total of more than one billion dollars of bonds reaches maturity within the next 3 1/2 years. This total is made up of about $52,900,000 War Loan 5% Bonds due October 1, 1931; $73,300,000 Renewal Loan 5 1/2% Bonds due November 1, 1932; $446,600,000 Victory Loan 5 1/2% Bonds due November 1, 1933; and $512,000,000 Victory Loan 5 1/2% Bonds due November 1, 1934.

Holders of bonds of these issues are being given the opportunity of continuing their investment over a longer term in the direct obligations of the Dominion Government. They will not lose anything in the way of interest payments or income tax exemption by exchanging for bonds of the 1931 Conversion Loan. It is explained that the new bonds will carry coupons entitling holders to receive up to the date of the maturity of their old bonds the same interest payments and tax free privileges as they would enjoy if they held their War Loan or Victory Bonds until the actual date of maturity in each case. For the remainder of the term of the 1931 Conversion Loan Bonds, they will carry interest at the rate of 4% per annum, which, in the opinion of leading investment bankers, is a comparatively generous return in view of the interest rates now prevailing in the London and New York markets.

Conversion applications are now being invited up to a total of $250,000,000 of the new bonds. It is announced, however, that the Minister of Finance reserves the right to increase or decrease this amount in his discretion. Subscription lists will open today and will close on or before the 23rd of May, as may be decided by the Government.

FU MANCHU DEAD? NOT BY LONG SHOT

FEARSOME ORIENTAL VILLAIN RETURNS IN THRILLING PARAMOUNT FILM

Warner Oland, villain in many of the silent as well as the talkie films, has created a new type of role in the character of Dr. Fu Manchu, famous Oriental menace of the popular Sax Rohmer stories.

Oland makes this grim plotter of death a thrilling person on the screen and he has been lauded by critics everywhere for his remarkable work in this respect.

The first Fu Manchu filmization was shown here months ago. It was called "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu." Those who saw it and thrilled to its gripping mystery and clever acting will have over its sequel, "The Return of Dr. Fu Manchu" which comes on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

For the benefit of those who were positive they witnessed the death of the crafty doctor in "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu" it must be said that the insidious Oriental was only foiled. The manner in which he outwitted not only audiences, but his detective foes in the picture as well, will be shown in the forthcoming film. It furnishes the first big thrills of the opening scene.

It soon becomes plain that Fu Manchu is very much alive in this sequel picture. He begins at once to plan the demise of Dr. Jack Petrie, only surviving member of an English family whose other members were obliterated by the Oriental out of vengeance for an incident of the Boxer Rebellion. As a means to this end he effects the capture of Nayland Smith, Scotland Yard detective, and Lia Ellham, his ward. Smith escapes the clutches of Fu, but the cunning doctor holds Lia as hostage.

Jack decides to rescue Lia himself, and thus he becomes enmeshed in the fearsome plot by which all face death at the hands of the villain. After a series of thrilling scenes however, Smith makes a daring rescue. How he accomplishes his purpose and how Fu Manchu falls in his, provide the dynamic climax of the picture. And don't forget that owing to the school Musical Festival at the theatre on Friday next this wonderful picture will be shown TONIGHT (Wednesday) Thursday and Saturday.

CANADA DEVELOPING A WHEAT RUST CURE

TWO OR THREE YEARS TO SEE GENERAL USE OF IMMUNE VARIETIES

WINNIPEG.—Laboratory studies and practical experimentation carried on over a period of more than five years by the National Research Council of Canada, in co-operation with agricultural experts of the Western Provinces, have made it possible for the Council to announce that wheat rust is being conquered. For years, rust has been invading the Canadian wheat crop, sometimes reducing production by millions of bushels, and no progress was made in its extermination until the problem was tackled with systematic thoroughness by the Research Council, which is a Federal body.

The Council has been able to report distinct progress in two lines of activity: the development of rust-resistant varieties of wheat and the understanding of the fundamental qualities of the rust disease. They report a tremendous advance all along the line of battle and declare the major problem nearly solved. In fact the Council now is confident that within the next two or three years it will be possible to distribute rust-proof seed generally throughout the wheat-growing areas of the Dominion. Several new wheat hybrids in preliminary tests have shown high rust resistance and satisfactory yield and quality. These now are being subjected to still further severe tests at various points in the Prairie Provinces and such as continue to give a good account of themselves will be multiplied for distribution to farmers.

It has been shown by tests that prevailing winds of the North American continent carry the deadly spores of rust across the wheat belt from south to north. Last year, for instance, rust spores were reported in Texas on April 20, Nebraska on June 6, North Dakota June 24, Manitoba June 26, Saskatchewan July 11 and Alberta August 10. Air currents had carried the spores northward at the rate of approximately fifty miles per day.

INFORMATION BULLETIN FROM TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

We are in receipt of a bulletin of information on the work done at the Provincial Institute of Technology, Calgary. This is issued by the management on behalf of the students with the desire of assisting these young men to find jobs.

The unemployed are with us from time to time but the unemployable are our most serious menace. Anything that we can do to find work for men who have the initiative and perseverance to spend time and energy in equipping themselves for special lines of useful work should be done.

The young men attending the Technical Institute are drawn from all parts of the Province and represent the hard-working and forward-looking element in our population from which the best citizens of the coming generation will be developed.

The bulletin describes nine different lines of work in which training is given and is well illustrated. We commend the effort being made to bring the job to the man and to bring the right man to the job.

Oil Leases Are Now Set At 160 Acres

NEW REGULATIONS ISSUED BY PROV. MAKES CHANGES IN SURFACE RIGHTS

EDMONTON—Increase of the minimum area that may be leased for oil and gas development, making it 160 acres instead of 20; protection of surface rights, and provision for more closely supervised operation of wells, are among the most important points in the new petroleum and natural gas regulations under the Lands and Mines Act, announced by the minister, Hon. R. G. Reid.

The regulations, which have been under preparation for some time, are being referred to the oil and gas section of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and the Oil and Gas Association of Calgary for their consideration. They will be finally passed and printed and will go into effect at the first of June.

Much interest in the expected appearance of the new regulations has been shown by those concerned in the industry, and the net result will be to set definitely the terms and conditions upon which this part of the province's natural resources will be administered.

The main clauses in the regulations are summarized as follows, indicating also the most important changes from the old Dominion provisions:

1. The minimum areas that may be leased is 160 acres. Under the Dominion regulations the minimum area was 20 acres.
2. Persons becoming indebted for rental under the new regulations cannot acquire a new location until the arrears have been liquidated.
3. Applications must be made to the mining recorder.
4. The expenditure acceptable in satisfaction of rental will be determined by the actual well footage drilled, exclusive of cost of material and casing. Under the Dominion regulations the amount expended in boring operations, exclusive of costs of machinery and casing, could, with the permission of the minister, be deducted from the rental.
5. Grouping is restricted to 20,000 acres; the locations not to be separate one from the other by a greater distance than three miles, and the grouping to comprise an area rectangular in form not exceeding 600 square miles, the length not to exceed two times the breadth. Under the Dominion regulations the maximum area that could be grouped was 20,000 acres, but there was no limitation as to distance so long as the locations to form the group were separate one from the other by a distance not greater than two miles.
6. Credit for excess expenditures is limited to 25 per cent applicable on the location or locations grouped whereas under the Dominion regulations it ranged from ten to fifty per cent, but not greater than fifty per cent was granted.
7. Provision has been made that the interests of anyone in the surface shall be protected, and no lessee may enter upon any land until satisfactory arrangements have been made, either by mutual consent or through arbitration proceedings, for which provision is made in the regulations. Under the Dominion regulations, arbitration was conducted in the case of patented lands, but where the lands were under terminable grant, the lessee was required to put up a bond.

CANCELLATION PROVISIONS

8. Provision is made for the cancellation of a lease where the payment of royalty is in arrears, or in the case of an attempt being made to remove.

INCREASE OF JASPER PARK ELK

An original herd of 90 elk present to Jasper National Park by the United States in 1921, is now estimated to total 1,000. These elk, driven from their mountain feeding grounds on the higher levels by unusually heavy snows, have flocked to the Jasper Park Lodge golf course to graze on the lower levels of Athabasca Valley. The elk have taken advantage of this and are getting their "three squares a day" from the tender grass of the golf fairways. It has been necessary for the men left in charge of Jasper Park Lodge during the winter to construct protective devices to save the greens on the golf course.

Mr and Mrs J. Habkirk drove over from their home at Paradise Valley at the week end to visit their parents in town.

to defraud the crown by withholding any part of the revenue.

9. When a lease is cancelled, the rights will immediately be offered at auction, and if the rights are not bought they will, the following day, become available for application.

10. Provision has been made for the leasing of a location where there exists beds or seams of coal which are being worked or in respect of which operations have been undertaken.

11. The lessees are required to pay all taxes imposed by municipal improvement, school, irrigation and drainage districts.

12. The use of water flush drills is prohibited except upon such terms and conditions as may be prescribed.

13. Provision is made for a greater supervision of certain mechanical operations, and smoking is prohibited in the vicinity of any well or receptacle used for the storage of oil or gas.

14. The setting aside of crown reservations has been discontinued.

UNIVERSITY ACQUIRES GOOD PERCHERONS

Prof. J. P. Sackville of the Department of Animal Husbandry, University of Alberta has just returned from Iowa, where he purchased four purebred Percheron horses to be used in strengthening the horse breeding work at this institution. Included in this lot is the four year stallion, Bar nett, bred by F. J. Bruns, Kansas. He is sired by Alphonse, by Noiret, and his dam is Black Jane by Romper 2nd. This colt is weighing 2200 pounds and is a drafty, strong-boned horse with excellent feet and postures. Two of the mares were selected from the stud of J. O. Singmaster and Bous, Keota, Iowa. They are dark grays, rising four year old and both sired by Lagos and out of imported mares. These fillies should develop into ton mares and in breed type and quality are what one might expect from that well-known sire of Percherons. The third mare is rising five, black in color, weighing 1850 pounds, and is out of a son of Lagos. With the exception of one of the Lagos fillies, which won her class last summer at the Iowa State Fair, none of these animals have been exhibited.

CENSUS COMPILATION A TREMENDOUS TASK

COUNT OF CANADIANS INCLUDES GREAT BATTERY OF QUESTIONS

OTTAWA—With completion of the seventh decennial census of Canada which commenced June 1 there was made available for the experts of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics a vast mass of material out of which they will evolve many interesting tables and computations during ensuing months. The census itself is expected to show a population of about 11,000,000 persons, but that is the simplest item in the entire procedure. Information sought is more complete than ever before, and on the farm schedule alone there were 254 questions.

Out of the answers collected by 15,000 enumerators there will be available, for instance, the extent of co-operative trading in the past year, the actual extent of unemployment, and its cause and average duration as of June 1, the number of radio receivers in the Dominion and the number of farm houses with bath rooms and running water. Each adult was asked whether he or she was employed on the census date; if not, the length and cause of such unemployment.

Statistics have been collected on a huge scale concerning hospitals, asylums, reformatories and children's homes, intended to assist social welfare workers and government agencies in dealing with the problems of the ill and unfortunate. There is included also the first Dominion-wide gathering of data covering wholesale and retail business, this in response to a general demand for a comprehensive picture of commodity distribution. Data of interest taken by the census enumerators will be supplemented by special schedules which go into great detail.

On Saturday morning last, Mrs. W. Yeager left to visit at the home of her sister in Hamilton, Ont. We learn that Mr and Mrs Yeager will very likely be leaving town within the next two months to reside in the east.

THE RUMMAGE SALE

He tried to be generous about it but he was not a superman and in twenty minutes he had betrayed the fact that her change of mind had ruined his business chance.

Leonora was properly horrified. She offered at once to fulfill her contract, but he waved the idea away.

"Don't be a goose Leonora," he said. "I don't want you to marry me as a favor. If you don't want to, you don't and that's all there is to it. I meant just to tell you about the other thing and I wish I hadn't."

"I'm very glad you did," said Leonora. She had a resourceful executive nature and she applied her abilities to Jimmy's problem. "I shall find you another girl. No, don't laugh in that disagreeable way. You know as well as I do that it's quite possible to find someone who would suit you better than I did. After all, Jimmy, we did quarrel a good deal. I know just what you want—who better?"

"Who indeed," said Jimmy. "Since I want you?"

"This," said Leonora, "is the occasion for a rational marriage. The time is short but fortunately we need not waste any of it in looking for the right girl. I know her already. I know her thoroughly."

"Forgive my saying I am rather off women at the moment."

"Nonsense, Jimmy. You've got to find one in order to keep this job. And jobs are so nearly the most important things in life. Anyhow some people think that those are the best marriages—the reasoned-out ones, I mean—the French do. This girl is my first cousin, Julia Grace. You know them? No? Well you must have heard me speak of them, Julia is the oldest daughter."

"Leonora, I'm not a bit interested in Julia. I hate the name."

"She's not beautiful, I admit but she has a nice ladylike appearance. She is just my age, which is exactly your own, she speaks several languages, and—"

"And would be most unlikely to consider rushing off to the South Seas with a total stranger."

Leonora just glanced at her wrist watch. She was due to report at the office at ten sharp, but until then she could give her whole attention to Jimmy.

"I'll tell you why she might consider it. For six years, ever since her mother's death, she has been at the head of my uncle's house. She has been everything to him, daughter, companion and housekeeper. She is thoroughly accustomed to taking full charge of a man and she does it beautifully. Then a few months ago, my uncle suddenly remarried, very largely, I believe, to give the girls a mother—there are three younger ones, ranging from nineteen to fourteen, pretty little flibbety-gibbets I can't get on with at all."

"Well, she's a mother at right, the new wife. She's one of these new-thought—new diets, special food, and no desserts. And she daily exercises the whole family together of a morning (and the girls never used to get out of bed till noon, except Julia, of course.) She makes each do some service to the community and whenever a young man comes to see them, she is on hand with a few inspiring thoughts."

"Really, she makes life a pest, I feel so sorry for them. The younger ones are all looking for jobs, but Julia is too old to learn a job; she knows only one thing, the care of a man. Marriage is the only solution for her."

"You make her sound incredibly dreary, Leonora."

"She's not dreary, she's very charming in a quiet way. A great many men—"

Then she certainly wouldn't look at me."

"Oh, Jimmy, don't be silly. You know you are one of the most attractive men in the world. You have everything, looks, brains—"

"Yes, I know just what you are thinking—why, if I find you so delightful, am I throwing you over? But I'm a hard-boiled business woman, bent on my own success, and even I feel a horrid pang at the idea of handing you over to Julia."

"Well," he said, standing up, "you need not worry, I'm not going to be handed over to Julia or anyone else. I am going to resign my appointment and go back and see what I can do with the company in Baltimore."

"Would you mind just looking at Julia?"

"Very much indeed."

"Why?"

"It would be insulting to her to look her over and then let her know that she wouldn't do at all."

ing at a rummage sale that afternoon for a hospital—one of her stepmother's worthy charities. He could stop in on his way uptown and, if he liked Julia's jokes, he could give her a message—Leonora wanted them both to dine with her that evening.

"What nonsense," said Jimmy crossly.

But he promised to do it and she thanked him warmly, almost cringing. An idea came to him as he hung up the receiver. Leonora was no fool. Why had she made Julia sound so attractive? Not without intention. Evidently she was not wholly pleased with her own solution. She had set the machinery in motion and now wasn't quite sure that she wanted it to come off.

By George, that might be; perhaps like the proverbial blessing, he had brightened as he took his flight. Perhaps, if he appeared to fall in with her suggestions he could win her back. What a fool he had been not to think of this before. He saw himself rummaging back to the little flat—certainly Leonora, you are a genius. Julia is divine. . . . is enchanting. . . . why did you say she was not beautiful. . . . she has the beauty of a Fra Lippo Lippi madonna."

He saw Julia now quite clearly as a Fra Lippo Lippi. He'd teach Leonora—not to be so priggish, selecting her cousin from among her more serviceable cousins.

It was six o'clock when he presented himself at an unfrequented shop in Lexington Avenue where all day long the rummage sale had raged. The wild frenzy was over now. The police had withdrawn, only a few late purchasers and a band of exhausted young saleswomen remained to close up.

Jimmy had no trouble in picking out Julia. She was like a Fra Lippo Lippi—copied 37, an inexperienced art student—a nice-looking, long-haired girl with pale hair. So that was what Leonora had chosen for him?

He had a minute or two to observe her, for she was very busy selling a gray felt hat from a well-known St. James Street hatter to a fat little fruit dealer. Then a voice sounded beside him:

"Can I help you? I notice that is what they say to you in shops, though to be honest I don't want to help you. I want to sell you something you do not want."

He glanced down—a good way down, for he was five foot eleven and the voice came from just above the level of his elbow—a small, intensely alive little face, round and pink and brown.

He thought Julia could wait for a moment. "What do you want to sell me?" he said.

"That was a good hat," said the girl. "I know because I stole it from my father before he had quite finished with it—and the butler already had his eye on it too. How about a black marble clock with a sphinx? I would lend a certain solidity to any household."

"No, mine," answered Jimmy. "I am about to sail for the South Seas." He confessed that he was going—an Leonora with him—had increased since he had seen Julia.

"Oh how wonderful," said the brown-eyed girl. "Or do you just say that to avoid buying the clock? I'd give anything to be sailing for anywhere, especially to the South Seas, though I haven't the dimmest idea where they are—south presumably. Wouldn't an old spangled dress with a hole in it make a pretty present for a native queen? Or this pair of gold slippers. They bring luck; I've had the most perfect times in them."

He took up one of the slippers. He had never seen one so small.

"They were yours?"

She nodded. "I don't know why I gave them to the sale; they were quite good still."

"One of them would do nicely as a watch charm," he said regarding the object carefully.

She laughed and picked up a book. "How about a nice book for the steam engine?" She glanced at the title. It was the Constitution of the State of New York and she dropped it irreverently on the floor. "Or beads? Beads are just the thing for the South Seas; you make a social hit there with beads. All the books say so."

In the end he did buy a string of green glass beads and presented them to her and she, at his suggestion, bought an imitation tortoise-shell cigarette case with a medallion of a Roman emperor's head on it, and gave it to him.

During these transactions, which must have netted the hospital about fifty cents altogether, Jimmy had been guiltily conscious that pale Julia was doing her duty by the sale, had disposed of most of the last objects and was now closing the shop.

"I must go over and speak to Miss Chase," he said. "I have a message for her."

"But you have; you are. I am." He stared at her. "Was Leonora mad?"

"Your name is not Chase," he said firmly.

"I assure you it is."

He did not understand it but he gave a look of joy. "Good!" he said. "I've come especially to get you. Your cousin wants you to dine tonight. Your cousin Leonora—you and I."

"But I have an engagement. Fancy Leonora asking me to dine—that great woman—a woman with a future—"

"You must break your engagement. I can't—at least—"

"You'd hear something to your disadvantage if you did."

"What?"

"You'd only hear it if you come to dine—something strange and unexpected."

"Oh, dear, I don't see how I can, but of course, I will. Oh, Freddy," she added gaily, as a young man entered the shop, "there you are, just on time as usual. You know, I'm so sorry but I find I must dine with my cousin this evening."

Jimmy moved away tactfully and, when he came back, the young man had disappeared, and Miss Chase was putting on her hat and paying over all the money she had taken to the pale girl who was not Julia.

He called a taxi and had it ready when she came out. Of course almost anyone can call a taxi when the streets are full of them, but somehow this girl made Jimmy feel that he had invented it for her by the strength of his will and executive ability. She did this by a slightly wondering glance which she threw to him as she got in.

He had intended to explain the situation to her on the way, so that she wouldn't have any shock about his intentions, but he did not begin immediately for the reason that he was now quite sure what his intentions were. Was he asking her to join in a sort of a joke, the object of which was to bring Leonora to a proper frame of mind? Or was his real wish something quite different?

As he thought it over, the girl began to talk. "I wonder why Leonora has suddenly remembered my existence. We don't get on awfully well. I bore her. She told me once that she considered women who did not earn their own living, had no fiber, and I said those who do sometimes have too much."

"I'm devoted to your cousin," said Jimmy.

"Don't I detect a slight taint of loyalty in your tone?"

"A taint?"

"Well, I shouldn't want any of my young men to be loyal to me. You know—that I'd like to agree—but it wouldn't be loyal tone. However, I hope you are not really a young man of Leonora's. They have such a thin time—they are just an interruption to Leonora's business life. How many times I have heard her complain: 'No I could not put the contract through properly; a man has come on from Baltimore to see me and I really felt I must give him a little time.'"

"From Baltimore?" said Jimmy sharply. Why should the girl pick on that special city. "Has Leonora a young man from Baltimore?"

"Yes, I gather that one of the most persistent interruptions comes from Baltimore. But really, I feel sorrier for Leonora than for them. Think how tiresome it must be never to say to yourself: 'Heavens, I shall faint if he keeps me waiting five minutes, and die if he doesn't come at all.'"

"And have you said that often?"

She laughed. "I'm still hoping to be able to say it."

She smiled at him not pretending that she thought his interest on the subject an impersonal one. He could not help thinking how agreeable it would be to keep her waiting for, say four minutes, and to arrive just as she was drooping toward the floor.

Meantime she went on: "Now if you break an engagement with Leonora, I bet it's just like giving her a Christmas present."

It was true, but he did not like to hear it said "You have a very clear head," he said coldly.

"So I have," she answered, "but it's not what I'm accustomed to being complimented upon."

A few minutes later, they came plunging into Leonora's flat with that annoying manner of people not much interested in noticing what they are going to find because they feel so sure of bringing their own amusement with them.

As they took off their coats in the little dark hall, Jimmy called, "Well, Leonora, I've brought your cousin."

"I'm so delighted, Julia," Leonora called back and then, as she appeared in the string-room doorway, she gave a gasp. "But that's not Julia!" she cried. "That's only Betty!"

"Only!" cried Jimmy and Betty together.

Leonora smiled a rather superior smile. "Surely Jim," she said "you did not think I was recommending this child—for what we were speaking of. She's barely eighteen."

"And a very good age too," said Jimmy.

"What was I being not recommended for?" asked Betty.

Leonora patted her shoulder. "That is something you'll never know, my dear."

She will too," said Jimmy.

UTAH FARMERS ADOPT NEW
TEN COMMANDMENTS

At a recent Farm Bureau Meeting of the Uinta County, Utah, the following Ten Commandments were read by Mrs. Esplin, as reported in "The Utah Farmer." The Star reprints them here, believing that Alberta Farmers' Fight is similar and that farmers in this District will get quite a "kick" out of reading the troubles of the Utah farmer as set forth so differently from what is usually being said about how to run the farm.

1. I am the Lord of Finance, the god of Business—I have brought thee down from the glittering peaks of prosperity to the "Slough of Despond" and fresh eggs at 12c a dozen. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

2. Thou shalt organize a farm bureau whereby thou mayest retain thy farm and thy wife and thy son and thy daughter, a family type, and wherein thou mayest enjoy singing and speaking of hard times, and feast on the good things which thou canst not sell.

Thou has been commanded to multiply and replenish the earth and for thy obedience thou hast raised a surplus, brought on an over production and low costs. Go to the slaughter thou art, consider his ways and be wise.

3. Thou shalt not work—thou or thy wife or thy son or thy daughter or the stranger within thy gates. Six days shalt thou rest and remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. What hath a profited thee—to grub the sage brush from thy land, improve thy stock and pipe water and gas in thy hen coop. Hadst thou enjoyed thy bed, whittled away thy youth, thou wouldst now share the good fortune of the privileged classes the aristocracy of the United States, the distinguished UNEMPLOYED, free bread, free soup, free clothing—they, not thou, reap the rewards of thy industry.

4. Thou shalt not collect cash in any way, either for eggs or butter fat, or grain or livestock, neither shalt thou sell for money any of thy worldly goods, nor degrade thyself as Money Changers in the Temple. Likewise, thou shalt not plough or rant, prune or spray, or separate thy milk, set thy hens, for none of these things shall profit thee—consider the Elms, they toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as one of these.

5. Thou shalt not pay thy Federal farm taxes, yea, not the least fraction thereof for Congress will take thy earnings and appropriate them for the unemployed. It is not scriptural for can the blind lead the poor or the poor feed the poor?

6. Concern thyself, not overmuch on account of thy delinquent taxes—Pay them in thine own good time or better still, not at all, and let thy good name appear annually in the columns, reserved for the righteous so-called unjustly, delinquents—yea tarry this year and the next year and the year thereafter and thou shalt receive due recompense for thou shalt be able to buy thy property back for the amount of its taxes or its true value.

7. Thou shalt not cover thy neighbors business or thy bankers worries if thou hast borrowed money to put in a bathtub, bathe in peace—the note concerns thee not, its bath already profited thee, thou hast the plumbing rather let it trouble him who hath ten thee, for he no, thou, art the loser.

8. Thou shalt not complain at low prices for thou canst enjoy to the full the fruits of thy labors. Lift up thy heart in praise that wool is so cheap that thou mayest have blankets for thine own bed—that thou canst afford to consume thine own fresh eggs, feast on thine own spring chickens, and like the prodigal son, eat the fattened calf. For verily, I say unto you, hath come to pass—a land of flowing milk and honey (for there is no market for either) and gone are the days when my heart was young and fair and I lived on skim milk and fig potatoes or whatever Dad couldn't sell. Remember the allotted number of days, yea, the days of prosperity when thy sheep and cattle were shipped in trainloads to the Chicago stock yards while thou at home wore thy teeth to the bone on ancient ows and cows too old to chew hay or give milk. Now thou mayest indulge to thy stomach's utmost boundaries, baby lamb and teabone from thine own sheep and cattle on a thousand hills.

Thou shalt not envy bankers, merchants, or travelling salesmen, like-wise doctors, lawyers, or teachers. Behold the jag days! They shall lend thee money, sell thee goods, deliver thee aluminum and sets of books; remember thy tonsils and appendix, defend thee in court, teach thee wisdom, all for the joy of the service. Henceforth thou must honor them for thou hast but honor where-with to repay them.

9. I am a jealous god, a god of vengeance, I will visit my wrath on modern extravagances—I will not suffer purple bathtubs and New Fords while the kingdom of heaven is without plumbing and the angels have nothing but old-fashioned wings "By the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat thy bread"—not by tractors shall thou eat mayonnaise salad. I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children to the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. I shall not suffer the college campus and stadium. I shall humble thee to the industry and expense of Jack and Jill—and the old Oaken Bucket. I will starve college professors back to the farm to earn an honest living and I will promote the overworked farmers and farmers' wives to the paradise of Skaggs or J. C. Penney, where they will receive good wages with nothing to do.

10. Thou shalt not worry: If the De Laval Company takes thy separator back, there will be time for reading, rather than scouring and scalding all morning. If General Motors takes thy car rejoice in the company of thy sons and daughters in at nights instead of gasoline petting parties and that mother instead of shopping and going to the movies in far-distant wicked cities now looks well to the ways of thy household and sings "Home, Sweet Home." —Cardston News.

Yo-Yo

For children, the joy of living is just one fad after another. Witness the small boy who wanted a cowboy suit, then a "sojler" suit, then an aviator hat, bell-bottomed overalls, pants velvet in his trouser legs, and then wild-porc skins. Now he wants a yo-yo. It keeps business and fond parents on the jump keeping up with the wants of youth. Perhaps it is one of the things that keeps the world going around—who knows?

SWEEPSTAKES TICKETS SEIZED

Thousands of bulky parcels and letters containing sweepstakes tickets were seized in the Winnipeg post office en route to the Irish Sweepstakes Association. These tickets on the coming derby, were in aid of the Free State hospital in Ireland. Quite a few have been purchased in Wainwright district where several potential millionaires are awaiting the day of the draw and then those lucky there, the day of the great race. It is contrary to the criminal code of Canada to sell such lottery tickets and a fine of $200 is provided for those so convicted. The mail seized was confiscated and sent to the dead letter office at Ottawa. So possibly that's where your $2.50 is now!

ANIMALS AT LARGE

While the number of animals running at large within the town has not been anything like it used to be, still there are some owners permitting their horses, cows and chickens to make nuisances of themselves. Strict enforcement of the Pound by-law is the only remedy. Enforcing it once or twice is no good, but steady, persistent enforcement makes a difference, says an exchange.

This topic of animals running at large is the hardest annual known in any newspaper office in villages and towns, and it should be evident to all that if they desire to keep animals that they should have them under proper control every hour of the day and night.

The vacant lots within the town limits are NOT free grazing areas, and even if they were no unrestrained animals respects the boundaries of such lots if there happens to be a succulent garden handy where a change of ration is obtainable.

According to Chief Renwick, the police intend to make a lot of trouble for people who have no regard for their neighbors' rights. Horses, cows, and even chickens and dogs of destructive tendencies, must be curbed or either they or their owners will meet with grief.

Much has been written and preached about the desirability of beautifying of home properties, and to carry out this project in a proper manner, careless owners of stray animals, etc. (who usually have the smallest amount of this beautifying instinct) must be made to comply with the by laws or suffer the penalties.

CIVIC PRIDE WILL KEEP STREETS CLEAN

Better than the best street cleaners' broom ever invented for keeping the streets free from waste paper, banana peelings, cigar stubs and whatnot, is a sense of civic pride fairly well embedded in the consciousness of at least 90 per cent of those who tread the highways and byways of this or any other town says the Shamavon Standard.

Remember the latter is a preventive, the former a corrective, measure. Get together in one place a group of persons who like to live in a clean town and the expense of keeping that town sanitary, and free from street litter will be negligible. So far, however, among the civic minded crowd as many as one of the "don't care" variety to ten of the others, and watch that town slump in its rating as much as 50 per cent inside of six months. You've experienced this yourself. Move into a clean neighborhood, where say, all the houses in the block are well kept, though perhaps modest in size. Note the sense of well-being that a row of green lawns, neat porches, tidy walks, clipped hedges, creates within your own mind. Let some of the "careless crew" move into one of these homes, letting everything go to rack and ruin and through their undisciplined children, destroying much of that which their neighbors have worked hard to build up. In such a short time that one would hardly believe it that streets look like a cyclone centre from one end to the other. People grow weary of trying to keep vandals from persons from encroaching and take a "what's the use" attitude. The minority with its single blot spoils the appearance of the whole block.

In the downtown district keeping the streets and places of business clean may seem more difficult but is nevertheless highly important. Folks like to shop in well kept stores and dislike wading through a heap of paper and tumbling mustard to get in a doorway. The wine in this country makes it a hard matter to handle but reality, all the more important that receptacles be provided for waste and the public educated to use them. Bylaws would have to be passed of course, before force could be used and then it would be as difficult as the traffic problem if not more so. Both must be in the final analysis, with the quality of gray matter that rests beneath the surface of the populace in general. It certainly would be an idea worth trying out, however, this receptacle plan. Advertisements on the four sides of the sheet metal containers would not only brighten them up but defray all or part of the cost of having them made right here in town.

As it is now people have to throw anything they wish to discard into the gutter or else hang onto it until they reach a back lane or a vacant lot and neither of these places should be littered up any more than this street.

HOW TO GET BUSINESS

The following conversation was heard on Main Street last week:

"Hello, A. — how do you find business?"

"By going after it," snapped A. — who was able to make money whether times were good, bad, or indifferent.

"It pays to go after business. And men who know how to do it never neglect one of their best business getters — local advertising."

"The constant drop of water wears away the hardest stone. The constant gnaw of Toomer Mast makes the toughest bone. The constant cooling lover Wins the shy and blushing maid. The constant advertiser Is the one who gets the trade."

COMPETITION

Competition is said to be the life of trade. That is doubtless true to a degree, but beyond that we have no use for it. The modern business world is learning to substitute co-operation for competition, co-operation which seeks to co-operate production and consumption, to minimize the wastes of competition, to increase the profits of the producer and reduce the cost to the consumer.

Vicious though this may sound, this is the program which is being realized today in many industries and which is proving its value as a means of ending those troublesome and costly problems that are the result of unrestrained competition.

Increasingly shall we see co-operation replace competition in all forms of productive effort. Not only is the world becoming aware of the benefits to be so gained, but it is finding the necessary tools ready to its hand in the form of statistical data compiled and supplied by governments, banks and banking associations, industrial and agricultural organizations, boards of trade, and so on.

Never before has the information given to business progress along sound, constructive lines been so comprehensive, so accurate and so accessible as it is today. — P. M. Richards, in Toronto Saturday Night.

YOUR TOWN

Make of me what you will—I shall reflect you as clearly as a mirror throws back a candle-beam.

If I am pleasing to the eye of the stranger within my gates; if I am such a sight as, having seen me, he will remember me all his days as a thing of beauty, credit is yours.

Ambition and opportunity call some of my sons and daughters to high castles and mighty privileges, to my greater honor and to my good repute in far places, but it is not chiefly to those who are my strength.

My strength is in those who remain who are content with what I can offer them, and with what they can offer me.

It was the greatest of all Romans who said: "Better to be first in a little Iberian village than second in Rome."

I am more than wood and brick and stone—more even than flesh and blood—I am the composite soul of all who call me Home.

I am your town.

A BOND FOR A BOND

The Conversion Loan of 1931 of the Dominion Government makes an appeal to Canadian thrift by providing an opportunity to holders of maturing bonds to continue the benefits they have enjoyed as holders of Canada's premier security. They may enjoy the war-time interest rate and other privileges of the bonds they are holding until expiration and at the same time may extend the period of their secure investment for a period of fifteen to twenty-five years on the basis of yields now prevailing—yields which are constantly, if slowly, growing smaller and are almost certain to continue to do so; at least this is the opinion of those who are closely in touch with financial conditions and who are in a position to forecast investment trends of the next few years.

This renewal operation does not involve the raising of any additional money and therefore has no effect whatever upon the Dominion's obligations. Those uncertainties which may have been felt during the period of the world war have long since passed and even the doubts about the return of national prosperity are being dissipated as various economic factors indicate not only that the bottom of the depression has been reached, but that a sound foundation is being laid for constructive developments, even though the recovery may be gradual.

Any study of the price records over the years of British Consols or the securities of other representative Governments, if related to the present trend of commodity prices and other developments of economic significance leads inevitably to the conclusion that the market for bonds of the highest grade will continue to rise for a period extending considerably beyond the issues involved in this refunding operation.

There is no other logical conclusion from all the circumstances than that the Government in its program to take care of the refunding of heavy obligations created during war-time at a time when conditions do not permit of repayment out of revenues, is safeguarding the national interest and at the same time providing the Canadian people with an opportunity to continue an investment which has proven its real worth during a period of unusual stress.

The investor who has held a Dominion of Canada bond can do no better than to continue to hold a Dominion of Canada bond.

WHY HENS STOP LAYING

A flock that has laid heavily during the winter will generally slow up toward the middle of the summer when egg yield drops rapidly until it practically ceases without any apparent reason, then suspect vermin. Body lice, which remain on the birds and the red mite which infests the poultry house during the day, returning to the birds at roosting time, cause heavy losses. Mr. F. C. Eford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, recommends for the former dusting the birds with lice powder and applying Baue Ointment beneath the wings and for the red mite he recommends a strong solution of Zenoleum, or any other creolin preparation, applied to the cracks in the roosts and nest boxes at regular intervals throughout the summer. Coal oil applied in similar fashion at intervals is also recommended.

SHARP FREEZING KEEPS CORN ON-THE-COB FRESH

Sharp freezing corn on the cob is the latest addition to the rapidly increasing list of "quick-frozen" fresh foods. The corn is frozen within three or four hours after it is taken from the field. When it is thawed out weeks or months later it possesses the fresh flavour that is much better than the ears of corn which are sent to the big markets fresh.—Cold Storage Newsletter, Federal Dept. of Agriculture.

SUMMER HOME FOR HOGS

According to the Federal Department of Agriculture the hog does not require an expensive home. Not only that, but best results are actually obtained from the cheaper equipment. Two or three cabins, and a box-stall for the farrowing sow, will supply the necessary housing in the case of the farmer who grows a few hogs. The kind of cabin successfully used on the Experimental Farms is constructed of strong though relatively light material, and provided with hinged sides for the free passage of air in the summer season. It is built on runners so as to be easily shifted from place to place.

The A-shaped cabin is subject to damage by the pressure of the hogs from the inside. The upright cabin with peaked roof will last for years.

The Department issues a circular giving the specifications for a suitable summer home which, when tightened up and properly protected, makes an all-year hog house.

HEDGES ADD BEAUTY WHEN PLANTED RIGHT

Forty years' experience with hedges on Experimental Farms has afforded a wealth of information on hedges. Of 136 species and varieties that have been tested, 84 have survived the rigours of climate and test for suitability at the Central Farm. The information thus afforded has been set down in a bulletin of forty-four pages written by the Dominion Horticulturist. The lessons, drawn from experience in all of the provinces, bring out the varieties useful for windbreaks, screens, property divisions, and purely ornamental purposes.

SOIL DRIFTING &amp; WEED CONTROL INVESTIGATIONS AT NEW SUB-STATION

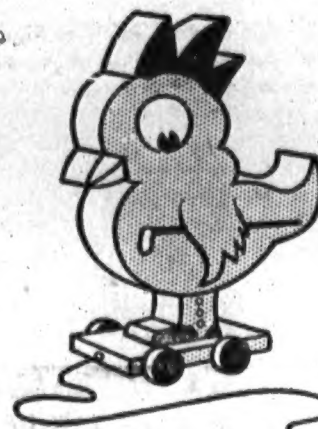

(Experimental Farms Note)

The Experimental Farms Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture has just established a new Experimental station near Regina, with an area of approximately 240 acres representative of the soil in the district. It is situated on Provincial land just south of the city and about a mile east of Highway No. 6. It will be operated under the direction of Mr. J. G. Taggart, Superintendent of the Swift Current Experimental Station, who will have an assistant in immediate charge.

This new station will serve the Regina-Moose Jaw-Weyburn area which comprises some 3,000,000 acres of heavy clay soil, one peculiarity of this soil is its tendency to air-slake, thereby leaving it in a condition which is particularly subject to drifting.

The chief problems under investigation will be soil drifting and weed control. The studies will include comparisons of different methods of summer fallowing, different methods of preparing fallow land for seeding, and methods of preparing stubble land for crop. The economic value of forage crops and their relationship to the general problems will be studied, as well as intensive plot studies of weeds which are prevalent in the area to be served.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper, mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine. That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given to the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

Stunts

THERE is practically nothing unusual in the inclination of the human race to perform stunts. There is and always has been a sort of something to compensate the performer for the danger in doing so—a thrill as a consequence of the action, a pleasurable feeling resulting from the publicity which follows, enjoyment from the envy of others, or merely inability to resist a dare to do it—something; and, the greater the danger or the more unusual the deed the greater is the compensation.

Probably it was one of these reasons that prompted Lady Godiva to perform her famous ride in the all-together on a white mare's back through the streets of her native town, or Bill Tell to puncture with an arrow an apple while it reposed on the head of his son.

Speaking of apples reminds me of an incident of the early school days of old No. 7 Hibbert. But the story is best told in the words co-operatively put together by a couple of the boys who sat together at one of the old pine desks at the rear of that famous institution of learning. Here it is:

Did you see that big green apple that Punky Stewart stole from Milky Maudson's orchard, that orchard on the knoll? Well, Dusty Miller ate it—the peelings, core and all—The greatest stunt! We dared him. Poor Dusty had the gall, But the doctor couldn't save him. It twisted his tummy tight, So Dusty's in his coffin. They'll bury him tonight.

Here's another stunt worth mentioning. It came to light during the slogan contest conducted by the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina in 1932. One of the 1,800 entries was written on a grain of wheat. It didn't win the $500 prize, but it is certainly deserving of honorable mention. Accompanying this entry was another grain of wheat upon which the Lord's Prayer was plainly written and I am told by Ripley that the entrant has written 1,200 letters on a single grain.

The performing of this sort of stunt is not so dangerous as looping-the-loop or tail-spinning in an aeroplane, or driving an automobile over 200 miles an hour, or going over the Niagara Falls in a barrel. It's unusual just the same.

basis, with select at from $7 at $7.25
and butchers $6 at $6.25.

SHEEP

Only light offerings have been received at Edmonton during the past week, with yearlings bringing from $5 at $6; ewes $4 at $5; and lambs
$7.50 at $8.50.

GRAIN

Fractional gains were scored at Winnipeg on Wednesday, through continued dry weather over the west.
Offerings were fairly liberal, but readily handled by commission houses
and spreaders, who were buying against sales at Chicago.CREAM—BUTTER—MILK CREAM—Prices have been established at 18c for special; 16c for first and 13c for second. Receipts are steadily increasing, while the next two weeks are expected to see still heavier shipments. CREAMERY
BUTTER—No. 1 cartons, 1/2c, No. 2
cartons, 2/3c; No. 1 prints, 1/2c and
No. 2 prints, 2/3c. Sales fairly good in Alberta, while few shipments being made to outside points. Understanding of a market not strong. CREAM BUTTER—Prices steady with fancy
table No. 1 10c, and No. 2 9c.
good demand for top grade, but others hard to move. CREAM—Fairly liberal. MILK—Price unchanged at $1.90 per 100 lbs, basis 3.6.

POULTRY—EGGS

POULTRY—Receipts very light,
though it is believed that once seeding operations have been completed, larger offerings will be available. Demand only fair. Prices declined 1 cent, with No. 1 fowl, over 5 lbs., at 11c; No. 1, 4-5 lbs, 10c; No. 1 under 4 lbs., 8c; No. 2, 5c; roosters 5 at 6c.
EGGS—Receipts beginning to decline,
while prices are holding unchanged.
Good demand, but bulk of it is being supplied by direct shipments. Most of jobbers' handlings going into storage.
Quotations are as follows: Extras, 11 at 12c, firsts, 9 at 10c; seconds 6
at 7c.HAY—OATS—GREENFEED HAY—Slightly firmer prices are prevailing for timothy this week,
latest quotations being $13 at $14 per ton at country points. Upland offerings very hard to move, and quoted unchanged at $9 per ton in the country. FEED OATS—Only fair demand passing in this market, with price
steady at 23 cents per bushel deliv-
ed. GREENFEED—Good demand nottifiable, but offerings somewhat scarce. Price remains steady at $9 per ton, delivered.

THIS IS SEED YEAR

It is pretty difficult to prophesy
the amount of bulk seed that will be sold this year, but many believe small quantities of seed will be ordered by hosts of men and women who have ordered none for years.
There will probably be more small gardens in America this year than atany time since the days of the war garden. Of course, the amount of food grown in a little back yard is but a small percentage of the food consumed by a family in a year, but when the man of the house has one or two idle days a week there is a strong temptation to devote these days to growing a few tomatoes, a few rows of corn, a few hills of potatoes, or perhaps two or three beds of greens and salads.After all, half a dozen packages of seeds cost very little. When one has considerable time he is indeed
wise if he gets back to nature once again. If he does not realize it when he begins to spade the earth he will surely realize it when sits down at the table some day and watches his little family dig lustily into their first dish of fresh green peas or bite
into a delicious cob of corn that was grown in the shade of the family wash.

USEFUL BUT EXPENSIVE

Mulching growing vegetables with paper, tested at ten Experimental Stations, proved that most vegetable crops are improved by this system,
which eliminates the necessity for cultivation. Such heat-loving plants as the cucumber, melon, pepper and tomato showed the most substantial increases in yield. According to the Director of the Experimental Farms System of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, the cost of the paper
is high, making its economical use very doubtful in most cases. It is all so pointed out that it is difficult to keep the paper from being blown about by the wind.

SERVE SUMMER SALADS

Do not neglect the salad in Summer time. As a matter of fact, the salad is something that should be featured strongly, not only during the hot summer but also during spring
when spring fever seems to be lurking around the corner every day.Summer salads may be elaborate,
but few of us can afford to servelaborate salads every day. We can all afford, however, to serve some simple little salad prepared from fruits and vegetables in season—particularly those that are selling at a moderate
price.Lettuce is usually a salad essential. Oranges are a very popular salad ingredient and lemon juice fits
in very nicely to moisten and flavor.
Practically all fruits and berries
as well as many vegetables fit into the summer salad. Three or four oranges halved, a slice of pineapple quartered, and three or four nice ripe strawberries, placed upon
a crisp leaf of lettuce should please anyone. If company is present top with a marshmallow half. If a little added flavor is desired sprinkle the salad with a combination of orange and lemon juice well sweetened—about two parts orange juice to one part lemon juice.HANDLING BLOAT IN DAIRY COWSBloating of dairy cows on pasture
is, and apparently always will be,
a serious problem in herd management
wherever legumes are used as pastures. This is perhaps more particularly true when the legume is alfalfa.
At the Dominion Experimental Station, Summerland, British Columbia,
alfalfa is used as a base in all pastures, and in spite of the best of care
being taken considerable trouble arises from bloat. It is possibly more severe at that particular period when the first crop of alfalfa would be approaching the blossoming period.The most practical means of lessening the danger is in the exercise of care in seeding that conditions under which bloating might occur are avoided. In general, cows should never be turned on alfalfa pasture with empty stomachs. A small feed of dry hay
before turning out is good practice.
Water should be readily available in
or near the pasture at all times.
Avoid turning on freshly irrigated pastures, and on pastures that are wet from natural precipitation or heavy dews, or coated with frost.Good results in avoiding serious trouble have also been found to follow the use of grasses mixed with the alfalfa when seeding down a pasture. Cows prefer grass to alfalfa or sweet clover, and will take the edge
off their appetites with grass before feeding on the alfalfa. Therefore, if possible, use grasses mixed with alfalfa in seeding down permanent or semi-permanent pastures.As a specific case of severe bloat
when the emergency does not quite call for the use of a trocar, neutral oil used as a drench has given highly satisfactory results. Many of the standard remedies which were used were effective, but imparted an odour
of milk, or had other objectional features. Neutral oil, given alone as a drench in quantities as small as one pint, has proven almost immediately
effective. This oil imparts no odour to the milk; is easy to give, and does not interfere with the secretion of milk. Care must be taken with this as with any other drench when administering it not to choke the animal or get any of the drench downon the lungs or fatal pneumonia is very likely to follow.

OUR LAWLESS LANGUAGE

"We'll begin with a box and the
plural is boxes;
But the plural of ox should be oxen,
not oxes.
Then one fowl is a goose, but two
are called geese.
Yes the plural of mouse should never be meesse!You may find a lone mouse or a whole nest of mice.
But the plural of house is houses, not hie!If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pain be called pen?If I speak of a foot, and you show
me your feet,
And I give you a boot—would a pair
be called beets?If one is a tooth and a whole set are teeth,
Why should not the plural of tooth
be beeth?Then one may be that and three would be those,
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose;And the plural of cat is cats, and not cose!
We speak of a brother, and also of
brethren,
But though we say mother, we never say methren!Then the masculine pronouns are he,
his, and him,
But imagine the feminine, she, this,
and shim!So English I fancy you all will agree
Is the funniest language you ever did see!"LETTERS to

sponsibility whatever for views expressed under this heading.

The Editor:

Dear Sir—In view of the fact that the hearts of many of our people have been turned away from God,
and because of the increase of Infidelity and Atheism in our midst, a committee of a large number of citizens of Alberta (Christian Men)
many of whom are members of the various Churches, representing practically every district in this Province has been formed (and is growing in number daily) for the purpose of promoting the Gospel of Jesus Christ in these Western Provinces in every way possible.Both Lloyd George and Calvin Coolidge have stated that revivals
of religion and a return to, and a maintenance of the faith of our fathers,
is the only thing that will save our civilization. To this end the committee will undertake to conduct a Un on Prophetic Bible Convention this summer, 1931, at Gooseberry Lake, Provincial Government Park, eight miles north of Consort, Alberta, for eight days, from June 28th to July 5th, inclusive. This will be strictly fundamental unsectarian convention, held for the sole purpose of proclaiming Christ to the people, without prejudice or favoritism to any creed or Church organization. Fundamentalist ministers and speakers of the various organizations will be invited to attend and contribute to the programme. All who read this letter are invited to attend this convention.The committee also has a prayer chain chart to be filled in by three hundred and thirty six persons, who will agree to pray one half hour each week for a revival of fundamental salvation in Alberta. We would ask the readers of your paper who are interested in this convention or the prayer chain, to write to the secretary for further information or for the allotment of one half hour on the prayer chain.The committee has adopted as their slogan A.F.C. or "ALBERTA FOR CHRIST."

FAILURES THIS YEAR

A smaller business mortality in the Dominion of Canada during the first quarter of this year is reflected in the 746 commercial failures, with libilities of $17,086,296, as reported by R. G. Lunn & Co. The reduction from the total for the corresponding period of 1930, when there were 789 defaults having an indebtedness of $19-119,296, is about 5 1/2 per cent in point of number of insolvencies and approximately 10 1/2 per cent in amount of money involved.Numerically, the betterment over the three months recently ended extended to the three main divisions of business—manufacturing, trading and other commercial lines—with the major decrease among manufacturers. Failures in the latter group were less numerous by 27 than those for the first quarter of 1930, while there were declines of 7 and 9 defaults, respectively in trading branches and among agents, brokers, etc.In analyzing the returns for separate Provinces, it is revealed that a decrease in the number of commercial failures was made only in three Pro-vinces: Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia. Of the seven showing an increase, the greatest number was recorded for Saskatchewan, where the 67 show a gain of 17 over the 50
during the first quarter of 1930. British Columbia was second with a gain of 14, and Nova Scotia third, with a gain of 12. While Manitoba also showed an increase of 12, the liabilities ran $1,568,653 in excess of the total of last year.

SHRUBBERY ADDS CHARM

Carefully planted shrubbery adds charm and value to the home. Authorities agree that best effects are acquired by confining the shrubs to the border and to the base of the dwelling, leaving an open lawn. In foundation planting shrubs of different heights should be chosen and the planting arranged irregularly and so placed as to conceal the alignment without completely covering the foundation.Suitable shrubs are described by the Dominion Horticulturist in the federal Department of Agriculture bulletin No. 89, which also tells how to go about the planting.

TICKLESS TIME

For housewives to whom time is important (which certainly includes most housewives) the self-starting electric clock has proved to be a real treasure. Its uncanny accuracy is its greatest claim to the affection of women who must get meals
on time and bundle children off to school and men to work, but there are many handsome models which also recommend it for decorative purposes.In keeping with the vogue for color, telephon clocks in lovely tones
are now being offered for living rooms, bedrooms and kitchens. Kitchen clocks are in green, ivory, orange, blue and yellow, and also in plain white and black to match any conceivable color scheme. The cases of these clocks are of washable moulded composition called beetle, and the colors are part of the beetle itself so that they cannot fade or wear.An attractive telephon for mantel desk or dressing table is a conservatively modern clock which comes in black, ivory, green, blue or red,
with bright chrome metal handle and ball feet. This unique clock also has an interesting new feature which makes it ideal for bedroom use. It is a luminescent clock, which is a dial
of thick glass with an opaque back, lighted evenly all around with tiny electric bulbs that cannot be seen themselves. The glow on the dial, by means of a small dinner screw on the back of the clock, can be softened
until the numerals are just barely visible, or it can be increased until the dial is bright enough to read by.*** LUMBER is cheaper than since before the war. If you have any repairs to make this is the best opportunity you will have for years to attend to it at the lowest costs. Let 1931 be your year to make money
by buying anything you need in the lumber the cheaper than you will ever get a chance to buy it again.
The Atlas Lumber Co. will be glad to figure your estimates free. Joe Welch, Mgr.

What Shall We Name The Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY
CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each new baby that comes into the world is indeed an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

No. 58—S' PHIE BRASLA

A few of my favorite names: for Jean, Arthur, Peter, and Leo. Babies are Mary Louise, Sonia, Gloria.

LEONARD is a name of Teutonic origin meaning "lion strong." GLORIANA is a name of Latin origin meaning "the glorious woman." It is a name invented by Spenser for the Queen of Fairyland representing Queen Elizabeth in the famous allegory "The Faerie Queene."

STOMACH TROUBLE

Discomfort in any part of the abdomen is apt to be blamed on the stomach. Those who frequently suffer from such discomfort usually say that they have "stomach trouble."

When the stomach goes on the rampage, most persons place the blame on the last thing which they have eaten, and make up their minds that this or that food does not agree with them.

Whether or not we enjoy health does depend, to a considerable extent, upon the food we eat. We know that in order to have health, we should use a balanced diet, which includes milk and milk products, fresh green vegetables and fruit.

We know also that we should not eat to excess. It is not to be expected that the stomach can be abused by the excessive or indiscriminate use of foods or beverages without causing trouble. The abuse of any organ of the body leads to the breakdown of that organ sooner or later. The whole body suffers as the result of such carelessness as trouble in one part affects the whole.

However, pain and discomfort in the abdomen are not, by any means, always traceable to the stomach or to the food taken.

The upset stomach may be due to worry, nervous strain or anxiety. The business man who rushes through his lunch, his mind occupied with office worries, and who does not take time to relax, will almost surely have his stomach "go back on him."

Loss of appetite, nausea and vomiting are the symptoms which usher in the onset of many of the acute diseases. In such cases, the stomach is affected by diseases which are attacking the body, and the stomach as one part of the whole body reflects these conditions. This is particularly noticeable when it is some other abdominal organ, such as the appendix or the gall bladder, which is involved.

The stomach may be upset as the result of heart disease. In order to do its work properly, the stomach requires an adequate supply of blood. If this supply falls because of heart disease, digestion is interfered with. The cause, in such cases, is to be found in the heart, not in the stomach. These conditions are mentioned because they indicate that while we know that pain or discomfort in the abdomen means that there is something wrong somewhere, even if there is nausea or vomiting it does not necessarily imply that it is the stomach which is primarily at fault. It does mean that the real cause must be found and treated if the condition is to be corrected.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

May Dainties

By Betty Barclay

Here are two delicious dishes that may be prepared at very little expense. They are unusual, and this adds to their natural attractiveness:

Diced Ham in Rice Ring

3 cups cooked rice
2 cups ham, diced
2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup ham stock

Make a white sauce of the fat, flour and ham stock. Season with pepper and salt, if needed. Arrange in ring on a platter. Fill center with the ham mixture, pour over the sauce and then garnish with stewed fruits and sprigs of parsley.

Rice Casserole

3 cups hot rice
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
dash of pepper

Mix ingredients together. Grease the casserole. With the help of a large spoon and spatula arrange the rice mixture on bottom and sides of the casserole, leaving the center hollow. Bake in moderate oven until golden brown—or fill the center with creamed material and bake all together.

Individual casseroles are made by moulding in custard or muffin pans.

Long days in the open, give little stomachs a craving that demands a bite between meals. Here are some cookie recipes that take care of such emergencies:

Butterscotch Cookies

3 1/2 cups special cake flour, sifted
1/2 tablespoon soda
1/2 tablespoon cream of tartar
1/2 cup butter or other shortening
2 cups sifted brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1/2 tablespoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add soda, and cream of tartar, and sift again. Cream butter add sugar gradually, and cream together thoroughly. Add eggs and beat well. Add vanilla and flour, mixing well. Shape into round or square loaf, wrap in waxed paper, and chill over night. Remove paper, cut in thin slices. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 8 minutes. Cookies may be sprinkled with chopped nuts before baking. Makes 8 dozen cookies.

MARGUERITES

Here is a treasure of a recipe for a dainty confection to be served on any occasion which demands light refreshments. It is an especially attractive and wholesome form of sweet to offer children.

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
1 egg white
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 cup chopped nut meats
Peelless Cream Sodas

Boil sugar and water until a thread forms when the syrup is dropped from a spoon. Beat egg white until stiff. Pour hot syrup slowly into the egg, beating continuously. Add lemon juice and continue beating until the mixture is stiff. Stir in nut meats and spread on sodas. Place the Peelless Cream Sodas on a flat baking sheet or shallow pan and brown in quick

SERVE FRUIT DRINKS

Do not forget the fruit drink when the weather is hot. Water loss through perspiration must be replenished. A delightful way to do this is through the medium of some tasteful beverage which not only supplies the needed water, but also furnishes the body with minerals and salts.

One-fashioned lemonade is one of the best summer drinks imaginable. Orangeade is also very desirable while a combination of sweetened orange or lemon juice with or without added water, may be used occasionally for a change.

When company is sitting on your front porch and you want something special, try an orange ginger ale. For each person served, combine 2/3 cup of orange juice with 1/3 cup ginger ale. Pour over cracked ice and serve immediately.

Another delicious cooling drink which may be made quickly calls for orange juice and ice cream. To 2/3 glass orange juice add a half of vanilla ice cream. Stir rapidly for a moment and then serve an ice cream soda.

Chocolate Ice Box Cookies

5/8 cups special cake flour, sifted
1 teaspoon soda
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1 cup sifted brown sugar
1 cup granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups butter or other shortening, melted
8 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, or 4 cups coconut, chopped

Sift flour once, measure, add soda, and sift again. Combine other ingredients in order given and add flour last. Pack tightly in pan 8x8 inches, lined with waxed paper. Chill overnight. Remove loaf from pan, cut in half, and slice crosswise in thin slices. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 5 minutes. Makes 6 dozen cookies.

MIRTH-PROVOKING INCIDENTS CROWD NEW TUXEDO FILM

"Trouble For Two" the new Educational-Tuxedo Talking Comedy, which shows this week on Wednesday Thursday and Saturday is built for laughs. It has a full quota of mirth-provoking incidents packed into its two reels of action and a great cast to put these incidents over.

Jack White, apparently not satisfied with just having two well-known comedians in the featured roles added three other popular funsters in the principal supporting parts: a clever comedienne and a former Ziegfeld Follies beauty. The result is mighty classy comedy entertainment.

And there is a plot to this comedy. McKee's wife is jealous. McKee is a timid soul, but has inadvertently caused a girl to think he is trying to flirt with her. Wife misunderstands and bawls him out. McKee is prevailed upon by his friend to step out with another woman to cure his wife's jealousy.

The friend arranges a party—and the two girls he gets are McKee's wife also trying to cure her husband's flirting and the girl he had insulted. All four meet in a cafe for a "big time"—and from then on, tales of plenty happen.

Don't forget showing also Wednesday this week.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

Edson R. Waite

There was a time not long ago when the United States of America was considered a sort of oasis in a desert of trade depression.

That has now passed and America, like other countries, has been reduced to seeking comfort in the doctrine of the inevitability of improvement.

We read many articles of statistical nature on the ebb and the flow of boom and depressions of years ago. The danger is now that if people are too well persuaded that periods of boom and slump are automatic, many may become indolent to make the requisite effort to bring back normal times.

It therefore must be emphasized that though there might be a sense of inevitability about the rise and fall, it also would be within human province to curtail the slump periods.

There is no question but that better days are certain. They are being established day by day.

Some people think that it has not been so much over production as unequal production and, worse still, unequal consumption.

To think and do business as usual, as many industries have done, will bring normal times back. As an example: Those large concerns who have met with the greatest success have been the concerns who have increased their newspaper advertising year by year, thereby increasing sales. This sales effort has kept them from feeling the effects of a slump. All businesses should do the same. Let's advertise and do business as usual!

20,000,000 FORD CARS

An event that takes its place among today's many achieved impossibilities! So short a time as twenty years ago, wisecracks would not have been able to visualise such an industrial accomplishment. Not only that—they would have KNOWN that no manufacturer ever would build twenty million automobiles!

20,000,000! That's a figure easily spoken, but too huge for comprehension. If you were to count that number at normal speed, and work at it eight hours a day it would take you nearly two years to reach the total.

But this much we can understand: Twenty million car-buyers CAN'T be wrong. That tremendous production resulted from a demand of equal scope. Such a demand could only have been reached because of the buyer's knowledge that in the product was unusual quality always sustained.

Leonora shook her head with calm negation and her excellent French maid came in and announced that mademoiselle was served.

They sat down at the little table with its pink flowers and tall candles and Leonora turned to Betty, said brightly:

'And what have you been doing with yourself, you and May and—'

'No use, Leonora,' said Betty. 'I mean to know what this is all about, and why you asked Julia to dinner and are so disappointed at finding it is me.'

'I, Betty, the verb 'to be' takes—'

'What is the story, Mr.—'

'Lorne, my name is, Jimmy Lorne; rather more at your service than you imagine.'

'The story wouldn't interest you Betty, dear,' observed Leonora firmly.

'Too bad then,' said Jimmy, 'for she is going to have a dull moment or two while I tell her. You must know, Miss Betty Chase, that about six months ago your cousin, in a moment of weakness, agreed to marry me.'

'Oh!' said Betty, in a tone of extreme pain.

'Don't be too much shocked,' said Jimmy. 'Remember, in excuse for her folly, that I lived in Baltimore, so that she seldom saw me, and that I was earning so little money that our actual marriage seemed very remote. But unfortunately for her, yesterday I was offered an excellent position in the South Seas, a position open only to a married man.'

'I begin to see the plot,' said Betty. 'Leonora did not want to leave her business and thought it might prove a good opening for Julia?'

'I said you had a clear head.'

'And you would allow Leonora to choose a wife for you?'

'He consented,' interrupted Leonora, 'as any sensible man would have done, to go to the rummage sale and see Julia without her knowing it; and why in the world he saw you instead of your sister—'

'It looks to me like fate,' said Betty laughing a little at Leonora's annoyance. 'I substituted for Julia at the last moment. I need not tell you it was a plan of our stepmother's and Julia hated it worse than I did. Never say, Mr. Lorne, that one's good deeds aren't rewarded.'

'I'm glad,' he returned, 'that you don't regret anything so far.'

Leonora interposed. 'This is not right, Jimmy,' she said. 'It is not like you in the first place Betty is very young and may be talking you seriously.'

'Are you taking me seriously?'

'How do you want to be taken?'

'How would 'for better or worse' strike you?'

Leonora began to be alarmed. It seemed to her that two people in whom she had an interest and in whom she felt a certain responsibility were behaving not only foolishly but rather badly.

'If this is a joke,' she said, 'it seems to me in wretched taste.'

'And if it isn't a joke, Leonora?'

'Then it is incredible folly. You know nothing of this man, Betty—'

'Except that you were engaged to him for six months, Leonora, I can't think of a better endorsement than that.'

Leonora turned to Jimmy: 'You must see to it that this is not the type of woman who could go with you, and you ought not to put such ideas into her head. Betty is a darling, a sweet, inexperienced child—'

'I haven't had such good luck with mature, dependable women, Leonora. The thing became like a nightmare to Leonora, as if she were trying to secure two people from a quicksand; the more she struggled over them the deeper she sank. They kept looking at each other as if physically incapable of withdrawing their eyes, and murmured such sentences as, 'Of course she's right, it is incredible folly only—'. Only my life has not had enough folly in it—'

No one ate the delicious dinner Eugene had cooked, and of course after course went away untailed, Leonora had the discomfort of knowing that Eugene would have hysterics because her works of art were unappreciated.

She was not surprised that, as soon as dinner was over, Betty said she must go home, but it gave her a pang to see Jimmy spring to his feet as if there was no doubt where his allegiance lay.

Her two guests were already in the little square hallway putting on their hats when Leonora made her last great play.

'Jimmy,' she said, 'rather than have you do this mad thing, to save you both—upon my word, I'll marry you myself.'

Jimmy was silent for a second, surprised that no wave of joy swept over him, and as he stood there a small hand took his (the one that was hidden from Leonora) and gave it a long, steady squeeze.

'No, Leonora,' he said, 'I could never get rid of the idea that you were doing it as a favor, and that would be a madder marriage—than—'

'You never loved me,' she said bitterly.

She could not answer firmly in the affirmative but said instead: 'Come back. At least do that for me, Jimmy. Leave Betty at home and come back I must talk to you.'

Jimmy's hand had not been released and he felt again that steady pressure.

'I'll telephone you,' he said—those words of evil portent; and he and Betty disappeared into the elevator.

Leonora sat alone, staring out across the park and thinking that she had ruined her life—... what was a career after all? Here was a man she could have loved, the most attractive man she had ever met, and she had let him go—it was too late—or was it? When he came back—? he did come back—'

The telephone rang and she sprang toward it. The voice was not Jimmy's however, but that of her employer. He had just read her preliminary report on the advertising campaign.

'Forgive me for calling you up, Miss Chase, but I wanted to tell you—... it's brilliant—... the most brilliant original work I ever saw—... all the directors are agreed—'

Praise! Rich, discriminating praise! She began to discuss details. Perhaps after all, she hadn't ruined her life—perhaps a career was not a quick empty life after all. The directors were in conference at that moment—

... their only criticism was that she had not allowed—... they had decided to increase the allotment for advertising one fifth. Oh, in that case she would revise her figures. She hung up the receiver sat down at her desk, drew her report toward her. She knew exactly where she would put the additional money.

When at last she had finished, she looked up at the clock. It was long after midnight, and Jimmy had not telephoned.

PLAYTHINGS

Tommy's parents were looking forward to Christmas morning almost as eagerly as Tommy himself. A great day was expected, and it couldn't come too soon. The huge sum of fifteen dollars had been set aside for nothing else but playthings and every cent of it had been spent. When Tommy crawled out of his bed he was to find his stockings by the fireplace filled with little odds and ends of presents. But after breakfast the real show was to begin. Then the front room with the Christmas tree in it was to be opened and Tommy was to find and outfit of playthings that would provide him with constant entertainment for a whole year.

Everything went as expected. Four year-old Tommy went into a hundred ecstatics as each new creation came into view. There was a little train which ran round and round on real tracks, and very seldom jumped off. There was a red automobile with an honest-to-goodness chauffeur holding firmly to the driving wheel. There was a little gun which shot pop-balls with alarming velocity and with very little certainty of direction. There were monkeys which climbed ropes, sailors who stood giddily on the decks of a gray battleship, and, by no means least, a little model radio set.

Everything was wonderful, and Tommy and his Dad had a splendid forenoon. But by the middle of the afternoon things were changed. The train and the auto and the monkeys had to be wound up every few minutes, and that soon got tiresome. Tommy got fidgety and restless, and tried to pile all the other toys on top of the train with himself on top of the lot. That wouldn't do so the toys had to be put away and Tommy went to bed for a rest. The day was in a fair way to be ruined.

Salvation came from an unexpected quarter. Out in the kitchen, scarcely noticed by anyone, was a great plain box sent by granddaddy. It was found to be full of wooden blocks of different sizes, shapes and colors. At first Tommy looked at the gift with suspicion, but before supper was ready he had found about a dozen different things that could be made with the blocks—fences, bridges, towers, tables and what not. And in the succeeding weeks and months Tommy built and rebuilt, always something new, something more elaborate. Within a week the mechanical toys were broken or discarded but the blocks never seemed to lose their interest.

For a little child the simplest play materials are the best. They afford opportunity for him to use his imagination and develop his creative abilities. A hobby-horse can't be much else but a hobby-horse, but a broomstick can be a horse, a carriage, an engine, or any one of a dozen other things according to the momentary fancy of the driver. So it is with all playthings. The more complex they are the more fixed they must be and the less they leave to the imagination. A fundamental instinct in child life is that of making things, of putting objects together to create something desired. It is a pity to rob him of these opportunities by providing nothing but mechanical toys.

GOOD ATTENDANCE EXPECTED AT FARM YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WEEK

Indications are that the Annual Young People's Week being held this year at the University of Alberta from June 4th to 10th, will be well attended. Registrations to date are well ahead of the number at the same time last year, and more are coming in every day.

This is the thirteenth Annual Farm Young People's Week to be held at the University and as the years go by this week is becoming more and more popular with the Farm Young People who are sent here by U.F.A., U.F.W.A., and Junior U.F.A. locals throughout the province.

During the week lectures are given to the boys in animal husbandry, field crops, horticulture, dairying and agricultural engineering, while the girls receive lectures and demonstrations in Household Economics, home nursing, history and literature. In addition, several trips are made to points of interest in the city.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

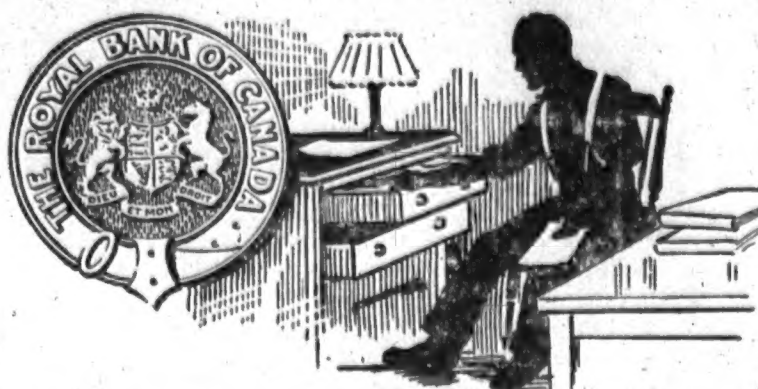

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"I'm sure it was here!"

VALUABLE papers—agreements, deeds, stocks, bonds, policies—all these things are subject to constant danger from loss if kept on your farm. Fire and theft, too, are always a menace.

There is no need to run these risks when a Safety Deposit Box costs as little as $3 a year to rent, yet gives you every protection.

News And Views From All Quarters

BORN—To Mr and Mrs F. Hyland,
at the Wainwright municipal hospital on May 14th, a son.

Miss L. Tweedie, of the hospital nursing staff was in the city on Tuesday to be present at the graduation exercises at the Misericordia hospital theatre.

At a meeting held in the Town Hall
last week called by Scout-master Class Lilly, a joint parent-scout committee was appointed for the purpose of furthering the aims of that organization. To work with a troop committed composed of Messrs Redgwell,
Stewart, and Rev Trendell,
Messrs Siddall, Winston and Dr Wallace and Mrs Wallace, Mrs Chase and Mrs Fish were appointed as a parent committee.

Every garage in the country is kept busy repairing cars many of which are smashed in accidents the public never hears about. A judgment of nearly $4,000 was awarded recently against a former Wainwright boy (Leroy Goldworthy) the result of a car accident, and these cases are becoming very frequent. With better roads and faster speed a car is a dangerous thing to own unless it is fully insured. Before you leave on a trip
be sure your car is fully insured;
this can be arranged for 30, 60 or 90 days and the cost is not great. Joe Welch will be pleased to explain this insurance to you.

On Monday last Mrs C. Fread underwent an operation at the hospital and she is now feeling much better.

Mr Gordon-Kenny, has now returned from his vacation period and is back at his former duties again "in the cage" at the Bank of Montreal.

The men who were so badly injured in the wreck at Ribstone last week
and are patients at the hospital, are getting along nicely now, although likely to be some time before being discharged from the institution.

The Women's Auxiliary of St.
Thomas' Anglican church are holding a bazaar sale of home cooking
and afternoon tea, in the Oddfellows'
Hall, on Saturday, May 30th, from 3 to 6 p.m. Raffles, Junior W.A., Candy
and Flower booths etc.

The Rev. Bamfield, a travelling missionary from African fields is to speak in the Masonic Hall under the auspices of the United church at eight o'clock.

Mr A. Hughes, who last week was attacked by a horned owl out at the river was taken to a specialist in the city, and has been under treatment in hospital there. He is getting along very nicely now, although the optic had to be removed.

Moisture conditions were certainly improved over the week end with the steady rain all day Sunday and the Monday snowstorm. Seeding is almost finished as regards wheat, and a number of farmers are nearing the end of their oat planting. The farmers are falling back on "faithful Dobbin"
to some extent this year, instead of using the more expensive tractor to work for them. Hired help is plentiful too, in this particular territory.

A man whose income has not been reduced is truly lucky these days, for he is living much cheaper than ever before. This man should use the money thus saved by giving a few days' work to some unemployed. Paint your home; add a sun porch; add new screens; build a fence
or a garage this year while material and labor are cheap. Joe Welch at the Atlas yard can show you how to make money by spending a little;
phone 57.

Things must be picking up in this district at last. We learn that Forster & Brunker last week sold three new cars—and one for spot cash,
too!

Goodwill Day (May 18th) was observed for the first time on Monday
last by proclamation of the provincial government. Goodwill messages from England and Wales were broadcast for the scholars over special broadcasts during school hours.

We are sorry to know that Mr
Chas. Horn is still on the sick list and extend hopes for a speedy and complete recovery.

Owing to the theatre being used for the school festival on Friday night of this week, the weekly picture
will be shown Wednesday (tonight), Thursday and Saturday for this week
only.

We are glad to learn that Mr W.
H. Horn is now getting along nicely and regaining his strength, although a patient at the hospital.

The Montreal-Alberta Petroleum
have a new manager's office built,
and are making the work preliminary
to drilling in their new well.

Two young buffaloes are being crat-
ed up at the National park this week.
There are to be shipped to one of the zoological gardens in Holland.

Mr Harvey Ward was visiting friends in Edmonton over the week end for a day or two.

Mrs George Petrie was selected as local delegate to the provincial convention of Women's Institutes in Edmonton.

Big Stuart will be shipping livestock (cattle and hogs) on Tuesday next, the 26th. Let him know what you have to sell.

A family named Young, living on Hudson's Bay land just west of Fabyan had the misfortune to lose their belongings last week when their home
and all the contents was destroyed by fire from some accidental cause.

The Rev Father Leamy is spending
a short holiday on a visit to Rev
Father Doyle in town.

Mrs Williams is in town with her little ones on a visit to her parents Mr and Mrs A. Love, for a short while.

Hard times is a period when nearly all the cars you see on the streets are paid for. In good times cars are bought on the finance plan and are insured by the finance company. These are paid monthly and the insurance
is cancelled as soon as the final payment is made. Many neglect to renew, even though the payment is very small. If you are in this class call or phone Joe Welch and have your car insured at once, as a spark from the exhaust or a crossed wire
is often the cause of a serious fire loss. Phone 57 and let the insurance company carry the risk!

While hauling a large load of casting for one of the wells last week, a big truck which with its load tipped
the scales at possibly twenty tons, sank one of its wheels in the newly-
filled water trench on Main street,
with the result that some delay was caused. No damage resulted, however.

Mr A. Everett, of Auburndale, bought a new Oldsmobile last week end and is tickled with his purchase,
too.

After a visit of a month at Prince Albert, Miss B. Brovold has now returned to her duties at the Wainwright hotel.

Congratulations are in order to Principal D. Kyle, he having received word that he most successfully passed his university exams which he recently undertook.

Don't forget the big feature tackle at the theatre is showing tonight in place of Friday evening owing to the musical festival.

All lectures, etc., to the contrary,
it must be hard indeed to raise trees
when they are so susceptible to blight.
The splendid trees in the garden of Mr W. Brunker are covered with millions of these parasites, and Bill is seeking advice from the department of agriculture to attempt to save the trees from premature killing.

Tomorrow (Thursday) evening will see the annual visit of the president of the Rebekah Assembly of Alberta (Mrs M. Macgregor, of Lethbridge) to the local lodge, and the members have truly planned a "big night" for the occasion. The degree will be commenced on a candidate, and refreshments will be served. ALL members are asked to make an effort to be on hand by eight o'clock sharp.

After a separation of over twenty years, Mr J. Frampton, of Biggar, paid a visit to his old friend, the Editor, at the week end, and just to show how young they both keep—
they both knew each other at a glance.
The visitor says that things are just as slow at home as they seem to him
here—But, of course, at seeding time everyone is busy on the farm around here!

You are missing a chance that may never come again to you in a lifetime—to save money by building
painting or repairing your home or property—while all building material can be bought at prices lower than
for many years. Labor, too, is plentiful. Take this opportunity to get $2.00 in value for $1.00 in cash. The Atlas Lumber Co. will be glad to figure your estimates FREE, and will supply you with competent men
to do your work.

On a visit to relatives and friends
in the Old Country, Mrs E. L. B. Mc-Leod, of Heath, left on the C.N. after on Friday morning last. She expects to be gone for about six months.

A large number of the members of the Rebekah degree L.O.O.F. motored over to Czar last week to swell the numbers who were present there to greet the president of that organization on her annual visit.

Owing to the stormy weather on Monday last Pilot Brown who was to give exhibition passenger flights
in his aeroplane on Monday at Bushey Head lake postponed his visit till today (Wednesday). No doubt there will be a large number of local people who will take advantage of this novelty arranged by Mr A. Dupre.

A carload of cedar posts and poles has just been unloaded at the Atlas yard. Just what you need for fencing and repairing. Phone 57. Joe Welch, mgr.

Although wheat prices are not yet
on the "up and up" a large number of our farmers are shipping these days after completing their seeding.

Messrs J. C. McLeod and J. W.
Fraser left on Tuesday by auto for a trip to Ponoka and Edmonton on business connected with their refinery in terrosta.

Chief Renville is out gunning these days for the parties who on Monday night after midnight were driving round town with a "fire siren" alarm on their car or truck. Incidentally if they are found it is likely to go hard with them for disturbing so many citizens, who were brought from their beds by this dread alarm which continued for quite some time and over so wide an area!

When times are hard we must be more careful. At the present
price of farm produce, your home
and barn has greater value than when wheat is high, as it would take more grain to replace them now.
Don't take a chance on fire; insurance premiums are very low. Keep them paid and your property well insured. Joe Welch, phone 57.

To celebrate the host's—(whom we nearly went astray then!) birthday, a few friends gathered at the home of Mr and Mrs J. Cuthbertson on Monday evening, and a pleasant time was spent with cards and music.
Agonyway, John was born on May 17th
—? so congratulations were in order for the anniversary.

We hear that hard times are caused by capital not being employed; but every dollar that comes to see us is so busy that it can't stay
a minute; so we have plenty of time to figure up the cost of your painting or stucco job; or the fence,
sidewalk, or other building or repairs you wish done—Atlas Lumber
